MicroGREEN Polymers, Inc. Wins ZINO Zillionaire Investment Fund Award for Best Non-Technology Category

The company will receive a $60,000 investment prize to further its work creating environmentally sustainable solutions for the plastics and packaging industries

October 21, 2009 – Arlington, WA – MicroGREEN Polymers, an innovative plastics company that develops economically and ecologically viable advanced plastics technologies to promote sustainable living, is the recipient of ZINO Zillionaire's 2009 Investment Fund Award in the Best Non-Technology category. The Arlington, WA based company was chosen to receive the award based on its patented Ad-air™ technology and business plan, which were presented at the 4th Annual ZINO Zillionaire Investment Forum on September 17, 2009. A total of 28 entrepreneurs competed for two award investments of $60,000 each. The two winning companies were chosen by the ZINO Society members based on the viability of their business plans.

MicroGREEN Polymers will use the award investment to further the company's growth, open new facilities to expand to full commercial production scale, and promote the development of its Ad-air technology. The technology enables CPG companies to create environmentally-friendly packaging at lower material costs via the patented Ad-air microcellular expansion process.

About MicroGREEN Polymers

MicroGREEN Polymers was founded in September 2002, with a mission to commercialize its patented solid-state microcellular expansion technology, which significantly reduces the financial and ecological costs of many plastic products while enhancing performance.
